at the University of Arizona (UA) in Tucson. From 2011-2012 he served as section chair of Public Health Policy and Management. He also had an appointment as professor in the UA College of Pharmacy and School of Government and Public Policy and served as director of the Center for Rural Health, which houses the Arizona State Office of Rural Health.

Prior to joining the faculty at UA, MacKinnon was the associate director for research and professor at the Dalhousie University College of Pharmacy in Halifax, Nova Scotia. He also has practiced in community and hospital pharmacy settings.

MacKinnon earned his undergraduate pharmacy degree at Dalhousie University. He completed a master’s degree in hospital pharmacy and an administrative hospital pharmacy residency at the University of Wisconsin Hospital and Clinics. He also received a doctorate and fellowship training at the University of Florida followed by a mid-career fellowship in 2007-2008 with the Commonwealth Fund in New York City under the mentorship of Stephen Soumerai, ScD, professor of population medicine at Harvard Medical School.

A past president of the Canadian Society of Hospital Pharmacists, MacKinnon has edited two books, Seamless Care: A Pharmacist’s Guide to Implementing and Evaluating Programs (2003) and Safe and Effective: The Eight Essential Elements of an Optimal Medication-Use System (2007). In 2010, he co-authored the Canadian national bestselling book Take as Directed: Your Prescription for Safe Health Care in Canada with Rhonda Church, MD, a family physician. His research interests include the quality and safety of health care, the role of the pharmacist, health policy and health issues among underserved populations. He has published more than 150 scientific papers.

The James L. Winkle College of Pharmacy is one of the oldest colleges of pharmacy in the United States, tracing its origins to 1850. It is fully accredited by the Accreditation Council for Pharmacy Education (ACPE) through 2012-2013.

Greer Glazer, PhD, became dean of the College of Nursing at the University of Cincinnati Jan. 1, 2012.

Previously, Glazer was dean and professor of nursing at the University of Massachusetts Boston, College of Nursing and Health Sciences. She has extensive clinical, teaching and research experience, conducting studies on domestic violence education, alcohol use during pregnancy and barriers to prenatal health care among African-American women.

Founded in 1889, UC's College of Nursing offered one of the first baccalaureate programs in nursing in the United States, and received the first endowment given to a nursing program. Glazer is UC's seventh nursing dean and 14th senior leader of the college, which was led for the first 51 years by a superintendent or director.

Glazer graduated summa cum laude with a bachelor's degree in nursing from the University of Michigan in 1976 and received her master's degree in nursing with a maternal/newborn focus from Case Western Reserve University in 1979. She received her PhD in nursing from Case Western in 1984.

Glazer was also a Fulbright Scholar (in Israel, 1988) and a Robert Wood Johnson Executive Nurse Fellow (2001-04).
